15.0GB of music Windows only (32bit / 64bit) All music are MP3 at 320 Kbps All music are in the folder /music/project/ on your computer Language selected: English (US) Having trouble getting the music? In that case you need to 1. Select a stream or a compressed file from the bin/playlist/ folder and upload to dropbox, then start the application.Q: How to get the stack trace of previous function call (in the same class)? I'm running a multithreaded server and got a crash in one of the threads. Since this is a WebRTC based server I cannot debug the crash by remote logging since WebRTC doesn't work in many browsers. Is there any way to get the crash stack trace? I want to log the stack trace to somewhere so that I can get it the next time it happens.

A: Stack traces are generally only visible to the server which is crashing. The best way you can reliably get a backtrace is to put the contents of the stack into a file and then in your web page you can use the following piece of code to display the file.

if (/* log file exists */) {
    int bytesRead = file.read(backtrace, 0, backtrace.length);
    if (bytesRead > 0) {

Q: Javascript event bubbling with local click (in its own window) I'm trying to get Javascript to detect when a local click is emitted in its own window. The click bubbles up to the parent window (I know that this can be prevented with a `preventDefault()` on the click event). What I want is to intercept the click in the window and return a falsy value (or in some other way signal that the click was not meant to be detected). The problem is that I have no idea how to do this. The click is in a tag, which I can't detect with `document.on`
